Introduction to the exhibit

The original posters and broadsides were scanned for the Louis Riel Institute as digital (tiff) images by the staff of Library and Archives Canada. The broadsides range in size from 42 cm. x 15 cm. (16.5 inch. x 5.9 inch.) to 144 cm. x 69 cm. (56.16 inch. x 27.1 inch.).

The broadside notice for St. Norbert parish is incomplete. However, two separate fragments of this broadside are included in the collection. No broadside for the St. François Xavier and Baie St. Paul claims has survived. However, twenty-three allotment sheets remain; a great number of these are barely legible and useful scans could not be produced. A number are quite legible and have been reproduced in this exhibit. These may be handwritten copies from a broadside that no longer exists.

Historical Background

Section 31 of the Manitoba Act provided:

And whereas, it is expedient, towards the extinguishment of the Indian Title to the lands in the Province, to appropriate a portion of such ungranted lands, to the extent of one million four hundred thousand acres thereof, for the benefit of the families of the half-breed residents, it is hereby enacted, that, under regulations to be from time to time made by the Governor General in such parts of the Province as he may deem expedient, to the extent aforesaid, and divide the same among the children of the half-breed heads of families residing in the Province at the time of the said transfer to Canada, and the same shall be granted to the said children respectively, in such mode and on such conditions as to settlement and otherwise, as the Governor General in Council may from time to time determine.

This provision entailed a land grant of 1.4 million acres for the Métis. Originally, the grant was destined for Métis “children of heads of family,” however, an “Act respecting the appropriation of certain Dominion Lands in Manitoba,” passed on 26 May 1874, allowed that Métis “heads-of-family” were also entitled to a land grant of 160 acres or dollars in scrip. The 1.4 million acre grant was calculated based on a census of the province that estimated the population of the Manitoba Métis to be equal to or less than 10,000. Therefore, according to this number, every participant in the grant would theoretically be allotted 140 acres – an allocation slightly smaller than that offered to homesteaders under the Dominion Lands Act. However, based on a “report of the Half-Breed Commissioners on their investigation of the claims of half-breed children to an allotment of land, and the claims of the heads of families to an issue of scrip,” the amount of the grants, per person, was raised to 160 dollars per head of family and 240 acres per child of head of family.

Although the Manitoba Act was passed in 1870, months of discussion and debate occurred within the government about how to carry out the distribution of land to the Métis. In the spring of 1875, John M. Machar and Matthew Ryan, barristers from Kingston and Montreal respectively, were appointed by Canada as Commissioners to investigate claims of “children of half-breed heads of families to participate in the grant of land, and the claims of the heads of families to a grant of scrip.”¹

Through federal Order-in-Council P.C. 128 1/2 on 23 March 1876 the recommendations and methods used by Machar and Ryan to distribute scrip were formally adopted and approved, thereby formulating a process of carrying-out Section 31 of the Manitoba Act of 1870.² Manitoba Métis “children-of-heads-of-family” were issued 240 acres of land, and “heads-of-family” were issued $160 in the form of scrip. After the 1.4 million acre land grant had been allocated, Métis individuals who had not been included in the original allocation, but who had a claim, were issued supplemental scrip (ca. 1885).³

The actual process of granting the 1.4 million acres of Section 31 land required Métis individuals to make an application, in the form of an affidavit, with the Commissioners who were appointed by the government. These Affidavits contained information about the applicant's family, occupation, marital status, children, and residence. We now refer to these documents as the Section 31 Manitoba Act Affidavits (or "Manitoba Affidavits").

The federal Department of the Interior presided over and kept records of the process of Manitoba Act grants. These records, including the original Affidavits used for Section 31 grants, still exist today and are held by Library and Archives Canada, Ottawa. The Affidavits were microfilmed by the National Archives.

EXAMPLES OF AFFIDAVITS

The stage was now set for the final act and by an order in Council of September 7, 1876, the Department issued regulations for the distribution of the half-breed grant. The Half-Breed Grant Commission had reported 5088 persons as entitled, but the rights of an additional 226 persons had been verified subsequent to the commission sittings. To provide for future claims which might be verified the total number of claimants was placed at 5,883 which, when divided into the grant area of 1,400,000 acres, allowed 240 acres for each claimant. The 240-acre allotment, in contrast to the previous allotments of 140 and 190 acres, was easy of description under the survey subdivision system and therefore presented no obstacle to distribution. All previous allotments were cancelled and Lieutenant-Governor Morris was requested to proceed with the new allotment.⁴

The drawings and allotment of the lands began on October 30, 1876, under Morris' supervision. In a letter to Ottawa reporting the beginning of the drawing, the Lieutenant-Governor reopened the discussion as to the advisability of publishing lists containing a description of the allotment and the names of the allottees as soon as possible after the distribution had been approved by the Privy Council, and recommended again that the lands so allotted should vest in the allottees pending the issue of patents.⁵ The Department of the Interior, in this instance, either viewed the suggestions with favour, or had already decided upon some such practice, because lists began to issue early in 1877, which described the allotments, designated the allottees, and stated that the claims of such allottees had been approved.⁶

All but seven of the parish allotments were completed in 1877 under Lieutenant-Governor Morris' supervision and 1,115 patents were issued in that year.⁷ Joseph Cauchon succeeded Morris as Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba on December 2, 1877, and although he was asked to proceed at once with the allotments in the remaining parishes, he declined to do so because of representations that were made to him concerning disputed claims which existed in some of the parishes.⁸ The Department of the Interior was forced to investigate these claims and as a result allotments in two parishes only were made during 1878.⁹ In that year, however, the Minister in order to facilitate the final disposal of the Halfbreed grant received authority to issue patents to all claimants irrespective of age or sex.¹⁰ Allotments were made during 1879 and the early months of 1880 in the five remaining parishes. Patent issue was practically completed in 1880, and it may be said that in that year the half-breed land grant in Manitoba was settled.

Although the Manitoba Act of 1870 set out the way in which the Metis were to receive their land subsequent amendments led to complicated procedures that in turn led to inordinate delays.

Sections 23 to 28 of the Dominion Lands Act made provision for the British and Canadian soldiers sent to Manitoba on February 11, 1870 as the Red River Expeditionary Force.

Section 27 reads:

And whereas by order to the Governor-in-Council, dated 25 April, 1871, it is declared that, — The officers and soldiers of the 1st or Ontario and 2nd or Quebec Battalion of Rifles, then stationed in Manitoba, whether in the service or depôt companies, and not having been dismissed therefrom, should be entitled to a free grant of land without actual residence, of one quarter section, — such grant is hereby confirmed, and the Minister of Militia and Defence is hereby authorized and required to issue the necessary warrants therefore accordingly: ...

Before the Metis children or adults received patents for their land several other groups received land grants in Manitoba:

- East Mennonite Reserve created in Manitoba on July 31, 1874 = 184,320 acres
- Mennonite financial grant of $100,000.00 established.
- New Iceland Reserve created just north of Manitoba in 1875 = 207,360 acres
- West Mennonite Reserve created in 1876 (move started in 1875) = 391,680 acres
