

Jean-Baptiste Millet dit Beauchemin. (1838-1900)

Jean-Baptiste was a member of the Louis Riel's Legislative Assembly of Assiniboia in 1870 as a member for St. Charles, which was also represented by his uncle, André Beauchemin. Jean was born on November 3, 1838, the son of Benjamin Beauchemin (b. 1811) and Marie Parenteau, the daughter of Joseph Parenteau and Suzanne Richard. In 1858, Jean-Baptiste was married to Marguerite McMillan (b. January 12, 1840). Marguerite was the daughter of William McMillan and Margaret Dease. They had ten children.

Jean represented St. Charles at the Convention of Forty in 1870 and served on Riel's second provisional government. Pierre Parenteau Sr. was his uncle as was André Beauchemin, both of whom also served on the Legislative Assembly of Assiniboia. Both of these men were members of Louis Riel's October 1869 Métis National Committee.
