Monique is quite clear in relating how these labels, type of housing, moving to maintain a livelihood. The language spoken when she attended school, church, made of travel in winter, kind of off the road (wild), then lumber was delivered by rail lines. Then they worked for over low wages, although things were not expensive.

When they moved they lived as a group or as a family they lived in tents. Although things were hard, she seems to think she had a good life
